Greetings to all, As the cover says: "These are not photographs, they are paintings." Although not totally photo realistic, to the untrained eye they can appear to be. I began drawing at a very young age and always wanted to achieve a high level of detail. I felt that with skill and accuracy I could do more with my art.

Airbrushing is beyond all other art tools the best tool to create extremely detailed results. So after years of experimentation with all forms of painting methods I finally learned the airbrush. The results of which you will find in this book. The question I'm always asked by people is: "how did you paint this?, this is a photo, it can't be a painting"? The answer to that question is: "Yes they are paintings, they are done with special techniques." Everything we see is made up of shapes that are defined by color. It does not matter if the image is totally abstract or not, it is still made up of shapes and color. The better one is at creating these two things, the better the painting will turn out. Good solid technical skills equal good paintings. Once these skills are advanced the artist is free to go in more directions and paint anything, anyway they wish. Fine art painting is no different from anything we do, whether it is visual arts, physical art, computer work, sports etc. The better one is at technique the more creativity and talent they can bring to the finished project. Thank you and I hope you enjoy this book, Bret Dixon.

Ce livre a pour objet les pondérations que la triangulation artiste, travail, technique a subies au cours de l'histoire de ce que l'auteur appelle l'aire d'oeuvrement occidentale. A l'époque moderne deux pondérations ont altéré en profondeur le profil de la triangulation artiste, travail, technique : le droit d'auteur d'une part, le ready made duchampien d'autre part, ce dernier permettant pour la première fois de penser l'oeuvrement au-delà du travail de représentation. Dans sa phase actuelle, l'aire d'oeuvrement occidentale est confrontée au double défi de son hégémonie mondiale que lui a conféré le concept d'art contemporain et au défi de nouveaux prétendants au premier rang desquels l'artiste non-humain incarné par la machine intelligente et sa prétention à l'autonomie.

Modern Chinese painting embodies the constant renewal and reinvigorations of Chinese civilization amidst rebellions, reforms, and revolutions, even if the process may appear confusing and bewildering. It also demonstrates the persistence of tradition and limits of continuities and changes in modern Chinese culture. Most significantly, it compels us to ask several important questions in the study of modern Chinese culture: How extensively can cultural tradition be re-interpreted before it is subverted? At what point is creative re-invention an act of betrayal of tradition? How has selective borrowing from Chinese tradition and foreign culture enabled modern Chinese artists to sustain themselves in the modern world? By focusing on the art of Huang Pin-hung (1865-1955), particularly his late work, this book attempts to provide some answers to these questions.
