Q: When did the Picts die out? Picts did not die out. The Picts survived as a group until early in the 10th century. There is no record of their dying out or migrating to other places. It is likely that the Picts simply developed into a multi-ethnic nation of Scotti, Picts, Britons, and Angles, which we now call Scotland.

From the accounts of Britain made by the classical authors, we know that by the fourth century AD, the predominant people in northern Scotland were referred to as "Picts". Throughout history, these Picts have been shadowy, enigmatic figures. From the outset, they were regarded as savage warriors but by the time the Norsemen were compiling their sagas and histories, the memory of the Picts had degenerated into a semi-mythical race of fairies.
